

CBO's Recent Publications and Work in Progress as of October 6, 2020

To provide the Congress with a comprehensive review of its work, the Congressional Budget Office releases an annual report summarizing completed projects. The agency also publishes quarterly reports, like this one, highlighting recent work and summarizing work in progress.¹

Recent Work

Over the past three months, CBO provided a variety of budget and economic analyses, fulfilling the agency's core mission of supporting the Congress during each stage of the legislative process. The agency published 123 cost estimates for legislation that had been reported by a committee or that was the subject of a motion to be placed on the consensus calendar. (Through September 30, CBO published a total of 404 cost estimates in 2020.) In addition, since its last quarterly report on work in progress, CBO has released 21 reports, working papers, and testimonies; they satisfied statutory requirements, fulfilled Congressional requests, and provided economic and budgetary analysis and technical information (see Table 1 on page 6).

A number of those publications provided updated analysis of the rapidly changing economic and budgetary outlook. Each month, CBO issued its Monthly Budget Review, an analysis of federal spending and revenues for the previous month and the fiscal year to date. The agency published updated budget projections for 2020 to 2030, as well as reports on the outlooks for major federal trust funds and for federal subsidies of health insurance during the same period. In addition, it published an analysis of the effects of pandemic-related legislation on output. And the agency published budget projections for the next 30 years in The 2020 Long-Term Budget Outlook.

In response to Congressional requests, CBO published an examination of the Internal Revenue Service's enforcement activities and their relationship to that agency's resources, an analysis of the distribution of household income in 2017, and an analysis of how recapitalizing Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac through administrative actions would affect CBO's budget projections and cash flows between those enterprises and their shareholders. CBO also published two reports in response to requests about national defense programs. One report analyzed the costs of allowing the New START treaty to expire, and the other examined the implications of the 2021 Future Years Defense Program for defense costs through 2035. In addition, CBO released reports in response to requests for health care analysis: One was about who went without health insurance in 2019, and another was about policies to achieve near-universal health insurance coverage.

CBO also published reports to explain its analytic methods. The agency provided an explanation of how statutory pay-as-you-go procedures operate, an evaluation of CBO's past revenue projections, a description of how CBO projects the effect of climate change on U.S. output, and an examination of how tax changes affect the labor market differently during periods of high and low unemployment. Also, as the law requires, CBO published its estimates of the limits on discretionary funding for fiscal years 2020 and 2021 that were established under the Budget Control Act of 2011.

Work in Progress

As of October 6, CBO was working on 250 cost estimates for legislation that had been ordered reported by a committee or that was the subject of a motion to be placed on the consensus calendar (see Table 2 on page 7). In addition, the agency was working on 43 analytic products that it expected to complete in the coming months.²

Of those 43 products, 5 are statutorily required:

- Costs of Implementing the Recommendations of the 2019 Ballistic Missile Review;
- Final Sequestration Report for Fiscal Year 2021;
- The Budget and Economic Outlook: 2021 to 2031;
- Expired and Expiring Authorizations of Appropriations: Fiscal Year 2020; and
- Report on the Troubled Asset Relief Program.

Five other reports that were under way as of October 6 are editions of reports that CBO produces on a regular basis to provide budgetary or economic information:

- Review of Activities Under the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act;
- Monthly Budget Review for September 2020;
- The Accuracy of CBO's Baseline Projections for Fiscal Year 2020;
- Options for Reducing the Deficit: 2021 to 2030; and

² That total includes only reports that are expected to be completed soon and that are not currently confidential.

- Legislation Enacted in the Second Session of the 116th Congress That Affects Mandatory Spending or Revenues.

Among the others that were under way, some will provide information about CBO's microeconomic and tax analyses:

- A description of the methods CBO uses to estimate the size and work experience of the foreign-born population in the United States;
- An assessment of the effect of changes in the distribution of earnings on the federal budget;
- An analysis of the amount of fiscal substitution that occurs in response to federal grants for capital spending on highways;
- A technical description of a model CBO uses to project the effects of policies on labor supply choices;
- An analysis of the distributional effects of carbon taxes;
- An analysis of the extent to which changes in payroll taxes are passed through to employees' wages; and
- A description of how CBO models effective tax rates on capital income.

Some will provide information about CBO's analyses of health care:

- A technical description of the methods CBO has developed to analyze the federal budgetary costs of proposals for single-payer health care systems that are based on the Medicare fee-for-service program; and
- A technical description of the methods CBO uses to project the effects of policies on pharmaceutical innovation.

Some will provide information about CBO's macroeconomic analyses:

- An explanation of the methods CBO used to estimate the effects of pandemic-related legislation on output;
- A description of the structure and applications of the policy growth model CBO uses to estimate the economic effects of different policies or shocks;
- An analysis of the economic and distributional effects of ways to finance major government programs;
- An assessment of the macroeconomic effects of illustrative single-payer health care systems, complementing other work on the effects of ways to finance major government programs;

- A review of the reasons for historically low real (inflation-adjusted) interest rates in recent decades and their likelihood in the future;
- An examination of how consumers and businesses form expectations of inflation;
- A description of illustrative economic scenarios that incorporate different assumptions about the specifications and timing of debt reduction;
- A technical description of a model CBO uses to inform its macroeconomic projections of the unemployment rate and the implications for business cycles; and
- An analysis of the causes and consequences of fiscal crises.

Others will explain or support the analytic methods used for CBO's financial analyses and budgetary estimates or provide background information:

- An explanation of CBO's forecast of the Federal Reserve's balance sheet, its direct and indirect implications for the federal budget, and its connection to CBO's forecast of Federal Reserve policies;
- A report on measures of cost for risky government activities;
- A report providing fair-value estimates of the financial programs and emergency lending facilities undertaken in response to the pandemic;
- An explanation of how CBO analyzes uncertainty surrounding baseline projections in The Long-Term Budget Outlook;
- A description of the methods CBO uses to estimate the cost of certain legislative proposals that require analysts to model the probabilities and costs of a range of potential outcomes;
- An explanation of some of the most commonly used terms in CBO's budget analyses;
- A reexamination of CBO's original estimate of the cost of the legislation establishing the Department of Defense Medicare-Eligible Retiree Health Care Fund; and
- An explanation of key scorekeeping guidelines and how CBO has used them to provide cost estimates for recent legislation.

Finally, seven requested products were in progress as of October 6:

- Testimony about CBO's budget projections (published on October 7);
- An examination of the effects of federal student loan policies on borrowing, loan repayment, cancellation, discharge, and forgiveness;
- An analysis of the distribution of certain tax expenditures;

- A report describing net spending on interest in the federal budget;
- A report describing how the prices of brand-name prescription drugs are determined in different federal programs and comparing those prices among programs;
- A report analyzing the cost of the Navy's Future Frigate Program; and
- An analysis of the effects of work requirements and programs that support work in means-tested transfer programs.

CBO makes known occasions when, in its work on requested analytic reports, the requester has made his or her request public or has permitted CBO to make the work public. Making those occasions known sometimes helps the agency gain outside feedback more effectively. Plans to publish other analytic reports are currently confidential. However, when the publication of an analytic report is imminent, CBO announces it, regardless of whether or not the plans were public or confidential up to that point.³ Upon completion, all reports are available to the public on CBO's website.

The Congressional Budget Office prepares this report each quarter to help keep the Congress informed about the agency's work. Sheila Campbell coordinated this edition, with contributions from many people at CBO. Jeffrey Kling reviewed the report, and Benjamin Plotinsky was the editor.

The report is available on CBO's website (www.cbo.gov/publication/56652). CBO seeks feedback to make its work as useful as possible. Please send any comments to communications@cbo.gov.
